Electrical Disturbances—Curious Phenomenon.

From the Virginia (Nevada) Enterprise, June 17.]

During the past three nights the engineers and machinists at the round-house of the Virginia and Truckee Railroad Company, in this city, have been in a state of lively excitement about some strange electrical disturbances which have occurred there regularly every night. For three nights all bands have been engaged in trying to solve the mystery, but have only partially succeeded. The company erected a large smokecoeded. The company crected a large smoke stack, which rises to a considerable height above the roaf of the round-house. At the base this smokestack is spread out in the shape of a funuel. It was built in order that the locometives may stand under it to cool off when they come in off the road, and also while being fired up in the morning. Into the side of this smokestack, three or four days ago, was run a stove-pipe from a stove standing in a room about forty feet distant. It is about this stove that the electrical disturbances take place. The first that was observed of these was about 11 o'clock, four nights since, when P. Cippingham, a well-known machinist, approached the steve for the purpose of putting wood in it. As the stick neared the stove he received such a shock that it fell from his hand, and his arm was benumbed. He at first thought he taken a sodden cramp in his arm. In trying again to put the wood into the stove he received a second shock. This time he observed actush and beard a sharp snap, which he at once recognized as a discharge of electricity. They tried all manner of experiments, and found that the stove was fully and heavily charged with electricity, it giving out sparks and flashes when a piece of iron, steel, wood, or the naked hand approached it. After an hour or two the phenomenon ceased. Th next day nothing was seen of it; but the next night about 11 o'clock, shortly after :

locomotive came in and stopped under the funnel of the smoke-stack, the stove was ngain charged, and began snapping and all sides. So it has been every night since.

They now know that the heated locomotive causes this electrical display, but in just what way is that which is still puzzling them. ARTESIAN WELLS THE CHEAPEST AND BEST Source of Water Supply,-In Europe engineers are paying a great deal of atten-tion to the subject of artesian wells, and the idea is rapidly gaining ground that they are the cheapest as well as the best sources of the water supply of large cities. Ever since the successful execution of the Grenelle LINEN TRAVELLING SUITS,

The first scientific body to take up this subject was the French Societé d'Encouragement pour l'Industrie Nationale," which, as far back as 1830, offered and awarded medals to those engineers who were most successful in procuring abundant supplies of water in localities where artesian wells had not been previously introduced. They are now being constructed in numerous places, and, as a rule, have proved as productive as their projectors could have wished.

Their importance can be scarcely over-estimated; yet it is only within the past score of years that any material progress has been made in this direction. For agricultural as well as for manufacturing and domestic purposes they have proved of great value, and it is believed that places now destitute of water, or scantily supplied with it, will ere long, by means of them, be rendered fertile and available. As an example of the benefical results of a well of this kind may be mentioned the case of the Millbank prison, London, which received its water from the Thames river, and which had always borne a bad reputation for unhealthiness from its opening in 1816 to 1854.

In the latter year excellent water was supplied from an artesian well in Trafalgar square, and at once the typhoid fever, diarrices, and dysentery-the death rate from which had been very large-disappeared, and for a period of over eighteen years there have been only three deaths from typhoid fever and only one from diarrhora and dysentery. The criminal population of London, according to Dr. McCormack, are, therefore, better off than the rest of the community, and are to be envied in respect to the abundant supply of pure, wholesome water they receive .- New York Tribune.

La Dow, who, unexpectedly to himself and everybody else, has been elected to Congress from Oregon on the Democratic ticket, seems to be a virgin in the political field.

He refused to take the stump during the canvass both because he couldn't stand the racket and the expense. "Why," said he to a friend, "I went to Pendleton and made a speech there, and it cost ten dollars! Ef I shud go down that to the Willamette and go to speechifvin', it ud probably cost me a hundred an' fitty dollars." When General Butler gets down into he mire and besmears himself and every one THREAD and BALBRIGGAN HOSIERY for ladies and within reach, when he hurls brickbats, decaying vegetables, and dead eats, when he calls out to the mob, "Come, boys, and see Old Cock Eye throw mud," the boys come tumbling around him, booting with delight. A smart man who can keep the boys amused, and does not mind soiling his hands, is a power in politics not to be despised .-- New York Tribune.

Young gentlemen who have wedding presents to make this mouth will bear in mind that young alligators can be bought in Kansas City just now for a dollar apiece. They came from Galveston as the first instalment of the products of that country beneficial to the West. Yellow-fever next month.-Leazenworth Times.

The two late well-defined cases of hydrophobia in New York have smished the theory that the disease is the product of a disordered imagination. Neither of the men who died in agonizing convulsions were amore believers in the existence of the disease than the learned doctors themselves .-
